MINNESOTA DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

In September 2005, Minnesota Department of Agriculture (MDA) conducted a questionnaire survey for state park visitors on the North Shore. The information collected indicates that more outreach is needed for state park visitors regarding the risks of firewood movement.

Items brought in by tourists, especially firewood, has become a concern across the Midwest, with its risk of harboring various invasive species. Also, the recent increase in gypsy moth populations found on the North Shore in 2005 has created a concern for this species becoming established across the state. Because of these issues, MDA designed a survey for the “transient population” or tourists to measure both their awareness of certain invasive species in Minnesota and to identify their current practices that may augment invasive species movement.

The questionnaire was completed by 309 state park visitors. The results of the questionnaire indicated a relatively high general knowledge of invasive species held by state park visitors overall.

A surprisingly large percentage of the respondents, 43%, indicated they typically bring firewood from some other place into the recreation areas that they visit. About 41% indicated that they typically bring firewood from their home supply. In fact, at least seven of the respondents were from areas of the United States that are regulated for gypsy moth or emerald ash borer, and their home supply was the most popular firewood source for these visitors. Only tents were brought more often than firewood into the recreation areas from outside, according to the visitors from the regulated areas.

The results indicate that even more experienced campers may not realize the risks of bringing in invasive species with firewood, and this is made more significant by the fact that firewood is coming from high risk areas. With the information gathered on the questionnaire respondents’ most used sporting goods stores, magazines and media outlets, MDA will be able to effectively develop a much needed outreach program on the risks of firewood movement.

FALL 2005 INFORMAL QUESTIONNAIRE SURVEY REPORT

INTRODUCTION AND OBJECTIVES

Public outreach for gypsy moth, and terrestrial invasive species in general, is a valuable tool and first step in controlling their introduction and spread by the general population. In order to begin an effectively targeted outreach program, the Minnesota Department of Agriculture (MDA) Invasive Species Unit created a baseline questionnaire survey as a way to research the most effective outreach methods.

The objective of the questionnaire survey was to gain an insight into the current level of gypsy moth and invasive species awareness among the transient population in Northern Minnesota, in order to refine MDA outreach efforts. It was designed to measure both awareness of certain invasive species in Minnesota and to identify current practices that may augment invasive species movement.

To accomplish the objective, a survey instrument was developed to collect and analyze information in regard to: awareness level of invasive species, general knowledge of invasive species, identification of the most commonly transported equipment/supplies, identification of habits according to location/residence; behaviors in purchasing and current sources of information. This data will help in determining gypsy moth informational needs and delivery methods and provide guidance for future activities in our public outreach efforts.

Items brought in by a transient population such as tourists have become a recent focus as a high risk pathway for new invasive species introductions. Firewood in particular, as a carrier of many new pests, has become a concern across the Midwest. The risk in firewood movement involves its possible harboring of wood borers (e.g., emerald ash borer) hiding under the bark, and defoliators (e.g., gypsy moth) on the bark as egg masses or other hard-to-identify life stages. In addition, the 2005 gypsy moth trapping program was reporting unexpected record numbers on Minnesota's North Shore area, an area heavily used by tourists. Because of these concerns, the MDA questionnaire survey was targeted at people participating in transitory activities on Minnesota's North Shore.

With the cooperation of Minnesota Department of Natural Resources (DNR) Division of Parks and Recreation, MDA sent employees to interview campers and other visitors at the state parks. The questionnaire that was used provided a "snap-shot" of the areas from which the visitors come (with particular interest in areas that are quarantined or otherwise regulated), and what habits may lead to unknowingly transporting gypsy moth or other invasive species to new areas. The intent is to use survey findings to support, enhance and strengthen existing and new gypsy moth outreach programs; aid in the development of new outreach material, and ascertain what the pest management information needs are for Minnesota.

METHODOLOGY

A questionnaire survey was conducted on Saturday, September 17, 2005 at eight DNR state parks along the North Shore (from north to south): Grand Portage, Judge C.R. Magney, Cascade River, Temperance River, George H. Crosby Manitou, Tettegouche, Split Rock, and Gooseberry Falls. Seasonal employees from the gypsy moth trapping program conducted the questionnaire survey. The questionnaire survey used by the seasonal employees can be found in Appendix A.

The seasonal employees went through each campground and gave campers the opportunity to either complete the questionnaire at that time, or take a copy and mail it to MDA later. Day visitors were given the option of either mailing completed questionnaires or dropping them in a drop box at the park entrance provided by the DNR. This resulted in a combination of convenience and volunteer sampling. The questionnaire had a box in the upper right hand corner where the seasonal employee would check “C” for camper or “D” for day visitor before handing out or completing.

The DNR provided access to the parks and use of the drop boxes. In addition, they gave us space for signage that explained our presence and the survey. Usual numbers of park visitors and other general information on the park reservations for that weekend was also made available.

The questionnaire began with questions about frequency of visits to recreational areas. The next group of questions attempted to measure general knowledge of invasive species. A pseudonym of Rhodesian banner thistle, a non-existent species, was included as a rough measure of invasive species knowledge. Questions on firewood transport and items typically packed by visitors were next, followed by several questions on media sources for information. The last question requested the respondent’s zip code.

Survey results were tabulated. No statistical analysis was performed, as bias is expected through the combination of convenience sampling, where the campers or visitors were interviewed as they were met, and volunteer sampling, where respondents were given the survey with the option of mailing it in or not. However, these tabulations may provide a solid pre-test for a follow-up statistically relevant study design, if needed.

Results

The questionnaire was completed by 309 people. Copies were received by mail until the end of November 2005. Of the respondents, 172 (56%) were day visitors and 115 (37%) were campers. Twenty two questionnaires were not designated as either. Results are discussed after each question. Please see questionnaire in Appendix A for actual questionnaire layout. See Appendix B for complete tables of results, and all data can be found in Appendix C.

Frequency of Use:

1. Including this visit, how often did you go camping or visit parks/recreational/natural areas in Minnesota this year?

Once...18%
2 to 5 times...52%
6 to 10 times...15%
11 to 15 times...6%
15 to 20 times...1%
More than 20 times...6%

2. How often did you go camping or visit parks/recreational/natural areas outside of Minnesota this year?

Never...39%
1 to 5 times...53%
6 to 10 times ...5%
11 to 15 times...1%
15 to 20 times...1%
More than 20 times...1%

The results indicate that most campers visit 2 to 5 times a year, both in Minnesota and outside of Minnesota. Results show a basic bell curve distribution, except for a slight increase in the number of heavy users, who visit recreational areas more than 20 times a year.

Invasive Species Awareness

3. Which of the following insects, plants or animals have you heard of? (check all that apply)

Zebra mussel...275 checks
Gypsy moth...273 checks
Eurasian watermilfoil...230 checks
Asian carp...185 checks
Buckthorn...169 checks
Purple Loosestrife...157 checks
Asian longhorned beetle...141 checks
Garlic mustard...68 checks
Emerald ash borer...55 checks
Rhodesian banner thistle...16 checks (pseudonym)

4. Which of the above insects, plants or animals is most familiar to you?

Eurasian water milfoil...75 count
Zebra mussel...73 count
Buckthorn...50 count
Purple loosestrife...38 count
Gypsy moth...29 count
Asian longhorned beetle...19 count
Asian carp...8 count
Garlic mustard...1 count
Emerald ash borer...1 count
Rhodesian banner thistle...1 checks(pseudonym)
Not answered...24

Many people had heard of zebra mussel and gypsy moth, perhaps because of the widespread problems caused by these pests across the nation. About 8% of the respondents did not answer question 4, possibly indicating familiarity with no invasive species. The overall results of these two questions seem to indicate a relatively high knowledge of invasive species held by state park visitors in general. Twelve percent of the respondents indicated they had heard of the (actually non-existent) Rhodesian banner thistle, and one claimed it was the invasive species with which they were most familiar. The term thistle is very familiar to most people and therefore may have been confusing. The two most familiar invasive species are regulated by the DNR, possibly a factor of their historically well-organized public relations efforts.

Firewood Sources, other Outdoor Household Articles

5. When you visit parks/recreational/natural areas or go camping, where do you typically get your firewood? (check all that apply)
From the park/recreational/natural area or campground I visit...50%
From my home supply...41%
From a store near the park or campground I visit...20%
From a store near my home...5%

6. When you visit parks/recreational/natural area or go camping, what equipment or supplies do you typically bring into these areas? (check all that apply)
Tent...68%
Lawn Furniture...49%
Fire wood...43%
Boat/canoe...30%
Camper/RV...25%
Trailer (boat, ATV or utility trailer)...12%
Barbeque...30%
ATV...2%

About 41% of the respondents indicated that they typically bring firewood from their home supply. In addition, 43% of the respondents indicated they typically bring firewood with them into recreation areas, making it the third most popular item to pack in after tents and lawn furniture. While this survey is not statistically designed, it is interesting to note that this information is similar to a DNR study (Mike Albers, DNR, personal communication 2006) done in the northeast parks in 2005, which showed that approximately 60% of campers had brought firewood with them when camping. This survey also shows that besides firewood, other Outdoor Household Articles (OHAs) are also commonly brought into these areas. OHAs are regulated in gypsy moth quarantine areas, similar to but in a slightly different category than regulated articles.

Effective Advertising Outlets

7. What are your favorite outdoor or sporting goods stores? (Name up to three)
Top three stores were, in order:
REI, 74 checks (27% of respondents listed)
Gander Mountain, 65 checks (24% of respondents listed)
Cabela's, 47 checks, (17% of respondents listed)

8. To what outdoor or sporting magazines do you subscribe? (Name up to three)
Magazines listed in order, and all were very close. This section was marked "none" or left blank by 157 respondents or 51%.

Outside magazine, 12 checks (9% of respondents listed)
Backpacker magazine, 8 checks (6% of respondents listed)
In -Fisherman magazine, 8 checks (6% of respondents listed)
Outdoor Life magazine, 8 checks (6% of respondents listed)
Outdoor News magazine, 6 checks (4% of respondents listed)
Field and Stream magazine, 4 checks (3% of respondents listed)
Minnesota Volunteer magazine, 4 checks (3% of respondents listed)

Sierra magazine, 4 checks (3% of respondents listed)
Sports Illustrated, 4 checks (3% of respondents listed)

9. Where do you typically get your news? (Name the top three. Please be as specific as possible and include names of media outlets.)
Top three were as follows:
Minneapolis/St Paul Star Tribune, 44 checks
Minnesota Public Radio, 22 checks
KARE 11, 17 checks

This information will be useful in future advertising efforts. MDA, and others interested in similar outreach, may incorporate this information into future outreach campaigns.

Home Areas of Respondents

10. What is your zip code?

See map for zip code locations in relation to quarantine areas. Of the 309 surveys received, six did not list zip codes. Based on the news media these respondents listed, it appears that of those six, one may be from Germany, and at least two may be from Canada.

According to the zip code data, the North Shore area was home to only a handful of the 309 respondents; all others were from across Minnesota as well as 13 other states and two other countries, Canada and Germany. (See map of respondent zip code locations in Appendix D.) Firewood brought from home supplies could have harbored pests not native to the North Shore.

In fact, at least seven of the respondents were from areas of the United States that are under quarantine for gypsy moth and in regulated areas for emerald ash borer. We pulled these respondents from the data and listed their answers to key questions regarding firewood source and visits.

Key:

GM = Gypsy Moth Quarantine Area

EAB Reg. = Emerald Ash Borer Regulated Area

Near EAB find = near the Emerald Ash Borer find on MI Upper Peninsula

The home supply was the most popular source for firewood for the visitors from the quarantine and/or regulated areas. Only tents were brought more often than firewood from home according to visitors from these areas. While most of these visitors were in Minnesota parks once this year, most also visit parks outside of Minnesota 1 to 5 times a year.

All Canadian visitors were from the Thunder Bay area, which is not under plant protection regulations at this time.

Additional Analysis

Visitor type vs. firewood source (Survey Question 5)

Visitor Type	Park	Home Supply	Store near Park	Store near Home
Camper	58	58	22	4
Day Visitor	84	59	34	7
Unknown	12	9	5	5
Grand Total	154	126	61	16

It is interesting to note that day visitors bring in firewood as often as did overnight campers.

When comparing the frequency of recreation area visits to the number of respondents who brought firewood from home, there appears to be no correlation. This indicates that even more experienced campers may not realize the risks of bringing in invasive species with firewood.

CONCLUSIONS

The results of the North Shore Parks questionnaire survey indicate that firewood could be a significant risk for the introduction of invasive species, considering the number of visitors from quarantine areas and the number of those visitors bringing firewood with them.

While state park visitors may be more attuned to natural resource issues than the general population, these survey results also show that little knowledge exists on the possibility of firewood harboring invasive species. This indicates that a firewood outreach campaign for this cross-section would probably be very effective if executed properly, and may be crucial to slowing the spread of invasive species associated with firewood.

Facilitating the flow of information within media outlets and following purchasing habits may be especially helpful in enhancing the awareness and publicity of invasive species and the risk inherent in firewood. Since many outdoor stores deal with these issues and give out advice to customers, it may be important to consider providing communications about invasive species to these professionals. With this and other information gathered in the questionnaire on the most popular sporting goods stores, magazines and media outlets for the park visitors surveyed, MDA will be able to effectively develop an outreach program on the risks of firewood movement.

The results of this questionnaire survey indicate that even more experienced campers may not realize the risks of bringing in invasive species with firewood, and also that the firewood is coming from high risk areas. MDA is developing a public outreach plan for recreationalists, and information from this survey will help to design the appropriate outreach elements and assure the success of the plan implementation and outreach efforts.
